If we believe the motive to be wholly selfish the merit is altogether destroyed. In academia, surely correct terminology and science is expected. Whether these neurological features are produced by years of meditation or predispose a person to take up intensive meditation training is not understood, nor do scientists know yet how these differences in brain structure might translate into behavior. They clustered and chatted, or tried to get decent shots of the train arriving as proof of conquest, and in it rolled bang on time. What did happen was not dramatic at all.
